Review Exercise

1. Most people fly just to get to their destination. Breaking world records is a pursuit for only the most ___________ flyers.

2. Earhart’s story is one of seeking new challenges. Perhaps it will ___________ in readers the desire to do extraordinary things.

3. Once Earhart was introduced to the thrills of flying, she never looked back. Her interest became an ___________ that never left her.

4. She was the first person to fly from Hawaii to the mainland. The ___________ crossing had already taken the lives of ten pilots.

5. Earhart would have been a big star on television. She is described as being ___________, a quality that comes over well on the small screen.

6. She was featured often in the newspapers and newsreels. Her good looks and natural ___________ made her a popular figure in the 1930s.

7. Earhart’s career took off when she married George Putnam. She trusted the ___________ Putnam to manage the business side of their relationship.

8. With a ___________ to advise her on business matters, Earhart was then free to concentrate on flying.
9. Putnam and Earhart each supplied something the other lacked. Her fame, combined with his business ability, made for a _______________ partnership.

10. Earhart had been planning a round-the-world flight for a long time. It was intended as a fitting _______________ to her career.

11. No one had succeeded in such an attempt. Even though it was dangerous, her husband _______________ the plan.

12. It is likely that we will never know what actually happened to Amelia Earhart. The evidence is too _______________ for anyone to have a firm opinion.

13. The plane could have been 500 miles off course when it disappeared. Some have questioned the _______________ of the navigator who accompanied her.

14. The outside world knew only that the plane was running out of fuel. Once radio contact was lost, people had no knowledge of the _______________ they were in.

15. Amelia Earhart had a great love of flight. Her _______________ for flying increased with each new adventure.